Bibb County Runoff Election Results from June 16, 2026

BY MIKE HOBSON Reporter
mike.hobson@centrevillepress.com

Bibb County voters turned out in low numbers yesterday to vote in the Republican and Democrat runoff election.

Out of a registered voter total of 15,024 votes were cast by 1,871 Bibb voters, representing a 12.45% turnout rate. Statewide results were lower than the Bibb average with only 408,740 votes cast by 3,812,426 registered voters. This represents a 10.72% participation rate in our statewide elections.

1,730 voted in the Bibb Republican Primary, 141 voted in the Bibb Democrat primary.

In the only contested Bibb County race political newcomer Gary Uber edged out Jarred Keith Kornegay for the Bibb County Commission District 2 by a total vote count of 340 to 293 votes.

In Statewide results:

John Wahl defeated Wes Allen in the Lt. Governor race, garnering 56.99% of the vote.

Barry Moore defeated Jared Hudson in the U.S. Senator race, garnering 55.8% of the vote.

In the Attorney General race Katherine Robertson defeated Jay Mitchell, with 55.07% of the vote.

Public Service Commission, Place 2 saw Jim Zeigler take the election with 51.34% of the vote.

Corey Hill won the Commissioner of Agriculture race with 53.3% over Christina McInnis.

Coach Geohagan Receives AHSAA "Making a Difference Award"

BY SAVANNAH LOGAN Reporter

Bibb County High School is celebrating a well-deserved honor as Coach Geohagan has been named the recipient of the 2026 Class 4A "Making a Difference Award" by the Alabama High School Athletic Association (AHSAA).

The award recognizes Coach Geohagan as the exemplary role model representing Class 4A, honoring his lasting impact as a leader, mentor, and positive influence both on and off the field.

Currently serving as Bibb County High School's assistant principal and head football coach, Coach Geohagan has dedicated his career to developing not only successful athletes, but young men and women of character. His leadership, toughness, and commitment to excellence have left a lasting mark on countless students and athletes throughout the years.

His coaching legacy is already firmly established, as he is recognized as the winningest head football coach in Bibb County High School history. However, his impact extends far beyond wins and losses. Through his mentorship and dedication to students, he has exemplified the qualities that the "Making a Difference Award" was created to celebrate.

In addition to his work at Bibb County High School, Coach Geohagan also represents District 3 as an at-large representative on the AHSAA Central Board of Control, continuing to help shape and support high school athletics across Alabama.

Great coaches do more than teach a game — they teach perseverance, discipline, accountability, and what it means to be part of something bigger than oneself. Coach Geohagan's recognition by the AHSAA is a reflection of the many lives he has influenced throughout his career and the lasting tradition of excellence he has helped build at Bibb County High School.

The Bibb County community has much to celebrate as one of its own receives this distinguished honor. Congratulations to Coach Geohagan on being named a 2026 AHSAA Class 4A "Making a Difference Award" recipient.

Alabama's Copperhead and Cottonmouth: What to Know About These Venomous Snakes

By Catherine Jackson

AUBURN UNIVERSITY, Ala. — Alabama is home to a variety of snakes, including six venomous species. The copperhead and cottonmouth are the most encountered of the venomous snake species throughout the state. Understanding their differences, similarities and behaviors can help residents appreciate the vital roles these snakes play in the ecosystem.

"Copperheads and cottonmouths, particularly, are some of our most feared wildlife in Alabama," said Wesley Anderson, an Alabama Extension wildlife specialist at Auburn University. "While they are both deserving of respect, they are also both commonly confused and misunderstood. Neither are nearly as aggressive or dangerous as many people think."

Shared Similarities

Copperheads and cottonmouths give live birth in late summer, typically in August or September. The newborns are venomous from birth but no more dangerous than adults. Young snakes are often easier to identify because of their more defined markings and yellow tail tips, which they use to lure prey.

Both species possess venom that breaks down cells and tissues. However, it is a myth that either species is quick to strike without warning. In general, both will vibrate their tails when threatened. Like all venomous snakes, they can still bite even after death, so caution is always advised when handling a recently killed snake.

"Venomous snakes play important roles in our environment, like pest control, and I don't personally advocate for killing any snake — venomous or not," said Anderson, also an assistant professor in the Auburn College of Forestry, Wildlife and Environment. "If someone feels like they must kill a copperhead or cottonmouth, please at least take precautions after doing so."

It is important to never handle dead snakes with bare hands. Anderson said the head can still deliver a dangerous bite hours after being decapitated. Also, be mindful of children and pets. If they are close by, move the snake's body with a shovel or rake to an area where they cannot encounter it.

Unique Differences

Copperheads are the most encountered venomous snake in the U.S., particularly in suburban and urban areas. They are medium-sized snakes, typically measuring 2 to 3 feet long. Their tan-to-copper coloring is distinctive, but copperheads are not always easy to identify. Multiple species of harmless snakes are often mistaken as copperheads and killed.

Cottonmouths, also known as water moccasins, are larger and heavier than copperheads are, averaging 2.5 to 4 feet long. They are semiaquatic snakes and are commonly found near water. They hunt both in water and on land, feeding on a wide range of prey, including fish. Their initial patterns may resemble those of copperheads, but Anderson said their markings tend to appear more pixelated or ragged.

"As cottonmouths age, they may lose their patterns almost entirely," Anderson said. "Unlike copperheads, cottonmouths have a darker facial mask and sometimes show a light-colored mouth, which can appear white."

Contrary to popular belief, copperheads are more likely to bite than cottonmouths are. However, while copperheads are responsible for the most venomous snakebites in the U.S., their bites are rarely fatal. Rather than fleeing, they often rely on camouflage to avoid confrontation.

Cottonmouths are more likely to stand their ground when confronted. They will gape and expose their light-colored mouths to serve as a warning signal to back off. Despite this dramatic show, fatalities are extremely rare from this species. In fact, cottonmouths only account for about approximately 2% of snakebite deaths in the U.S.

More Information

Both copperheads and cottonmouths are important parts of Alabama's natural landscape. While they can seem scary if threatened or accidentally encountered, they generally avoid humans when given the opportunity.

Learning to identify these snakes, understanding their behavior and maintaining a respectful distance can help prevent negative encounters.

Alabama State Parks Launches Statewide Habitat Restoration Initiative to Combat Invasive Species and Restore Native Landscapes

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (June 17, 2026) — Alabama State Parks has launched a new statewide habitat restoration initiative that will expand its ability to combat invasive species, restore native landscapes, improve wildlife habitat and engage communities in hands-on conservation efforts across Alabama.

Funded through a $25,000 grant from the Alabama Association of RC&D Councils, the Statewide Native Habitat Restoration Crew provides Alabama State Parks with a dedicated, mobile conservation capability that can be rapidly deployed to parks throughout the state. The initiative will support conservation projects, volunteer service opportunities and environmental education programs across Alabama's 21 state parks.

"Invasive species are one of the greatest challenges facing many of our natural areas," said Tasha Simon, Chief of Natural Resources for Alabama State Parks. "When invasive plants become established, they can displace native vegetation, reduce wildlife habitat, alter ecosystems and impact the overall health of the landscape. This initiative gives us the tools and resources needed to address those challenges more effectively while engaging volunteers and community partners in meaningful conservation work."

Alabama State Parks manages more than 48,000 acres of public lands, many of which require ongoing restoration and invasive species management.

The program officially launched June 4 at Lakepoint State Park, where students from the TRiO Upward Bound Program at Wallace Community College joined Alabama State Parks staff and volunteers to remove invasive Chinese tallowtree, an aggressive non-native species known for spreading rapidly and outcompeting native plants. The Lakepoint event combined hands-on restoration with environmental education, allowing participants to learn about invasive species management while helping improve habitat conditions within the park.

"This initiative represents much more than a new piece of equipment," said Alabama State Parks Director Matthew Capps. "It represents a statewide conservation team that can be deployed wherever the need exists across our park system. By restoring native habitat, removing invasive species and engaging volunteers in stewardship projects, we can make a greater impact on the landscapes we manage and the experiences we provide our visitors."

Grant funding was used to purchase and outfit specialized trailers, tools, safety equipment and restoration supplies that can be deployed wherever restoration needs arise within the park system. Funding will allow Alabama State Parks to support restoration projects and volunteer workdays at parks statewide while expanding opportunities for environmental education and community engagement.

"The Alabama Association of RC&D Councils is proud to support Alabama State Parks through this initiative," said Clara Romine, grants director for the Alabama Association of RC&D Councils. "By investing in habitat restoration and invasive species management, we are helping protect Alabama's natural resources while strengthening opportunities for community involvement and environmental stewardship."

Alabama State Parks plans to utilize the Statewide Native Habitat Restoration Crew at parks across the state throughout the year. Future projects will focus on removing invasive plant species, restoring native plant communities, improving wildlife habitat and engaging local communities in meaningful conservation efforts.

Organizations, schools, civic groups, and community partners interested in establishing a volunteer service day or participating in habitat restoration projects are encouraged to contact Simon at Tasha.Simon@dnr.alabama.gov.

Future projects will be scheduled at parks across Alabama, bringing together park staff, volunteers, schools, and community partners to improve and protect public lands. Information about future restoration projects and volunteer opportunities will be shared through Alabama State Parks social media channels.

About Alabama State Parks

The Alabama State Parks Division, a division of the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, manages 21 state parks encompassing more than 50,000 acres of land and water across Alabama. The parks range from Gulf Coast beaches to Appalachian Mountain landscapes and offer a variety of recreational opportunities including camping, lodging, hiking, golfing, fishing, nature tourism, and educational programming. Alabama State Parks primarily operates through visitor-generated revenue and partnerships that support long-term sustainability and public access. ## West Blocton Calls on Community to Help Honor Local Veterans This Fourth of July

BY SAVANNA LOGAN
REPORTER

As Independence Day approaches, the Town of West Blocton is preparing a special tribute to recognize the brave men and women who have answered the call to serve our country — and they need the community's help to make it possible.

Veterans are woven into the story of every town and every family. They are our neighbors, grandparents, parents, siblings, and friends who made sacrifices in service to something greater than themselves. This Fourth of July, West Blocton hopes to celebrate those individuals by sharing the faces and memories behind their service.

Community members are invited to submit photos and videos of veterans, whether from years past or present day, to be included in the tribute. A faded photograph tucked away in a family album, a picture from military service, or a recent snapshot can all help tell the story of the men and women who have helped protect the freedoms we enjoy.

This is an opportunity for the community to come together, remember those who have served, and ensure their dedication is recognized and appreciated.

If you have a veteran in your life whose story you would like to help share, send your photos or videos to TownClerk@townofwestblocton.org.

Every submission helps create a more meaningful tribute and serves as a reminder that behind every uniform is a person, a family, and a legacy of service.

This Fourth of July, let's come together as a community to honor our heroes and show our gratitude to those who have served our nation.

Alabama Extension to Offer ServSafe Manager's Course in Bibb County

BY SAVANNA LOGAN
REPORTER

In the food service industry, knowledge and preparation are essential ingredients for success. Whether operating a restaurant, managing a kitchen, supervising employees, or working toward career advancement in hospitality, understanding proper food safety practices helps protect both businesses and the communities they serve.

The Alabama Cooperative Extension System will offer a ServSafe Managers Course in Bibb County on June 29-30, 2026, providing participants with the opportunity to receive professional instruction in food safety and quality standards.

The two-day course will take place from 9:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. at the Bibb County Board of Education, located at 721 Walnut Street in Centreville.

The course cost is $150, which includes the ServSafe book and two full days of instruction.

ServSafe is a nationally recognized food safety training program through the National Restaurant Association and is designed to help food service professionals build the knowledge and skills necessary to maintain safe food handling practices.

Individuals interested in participating can register online at aces.edu/go/servsafe. For additional information, participants may contact Emily Ferko at emf0065@auburn.edu or (334) 752-3207.

The Alabama Cooperative Extension System, a partnership between Alabama A&M University and Auburn University, continues to provide valuable educational opportunities that equip individuals with practical skills and knowledge that benefit workplaces and communities across Alabama.

For those looking to strengthen their food safety expertise, meet professional requirements, or invest in their career in the food service industry, the upcoming ServSafe Managers Course offers a valuable opportunity right here in Bibb County.

The Debate About Legal Residence in Alabama Rages On In the Governor's Race

BY MIKE HOBSON

mike.hobson@centrevillepress.com

Some Bibb County (Centreville) voters are still stewing and offering their opinions on social media about the outcome of the Centreville Mayor 2025 Election Contest. In case you missed the background the August 2025 Mayor race in Centreville ended with Barry Cooner winning by a slim margin after the votes were certified. The outgoing Mayor, Mike Oakley, filed a formal election contest in the Bibb County Circuit Court, challenging the validity of several votes based on questions of their eligibility to vote, based on the residence issue. This month that case came to trial before Fourth Judicial Circuit Judge Marvin Wiggins.

We won't comment on the two days of testimony presented by the witnesses or the rulings made by Judge Wiggins. In the end, the Plaintiff (Oakley) withdrew his complaint and the case was dismissed, effectively confirming Barry Cooner was the winner of the contested race. We will say that the outcome of the case did little to tamp down local comments about voter residency and eligibility. Some comments were not very kind to the legal system either. Justice often takes a beating after a court case ends.

For those of you still confused about what makes a residence determination in a legal setting the following opinion column, offered by a legal scholar, sheds light on the matter. This is relevant in a newer context because the 2026 Gubernatorial race candidates are still trying to delegitimize Tommy Tuberville's legal status to run for Alabama Governor.

We will print the editorial below and you can be better informed about legal context on this issue.

OPINION BY BRANDON BLANKENSHIP

REPRINTED WITH THE PERMISSION OF 1819 NEWS

There is a difference between politics and law.

Politics asks which candidate is best for Alabama. The law asks whether a candidate meets the qualifications for office. When the issue is residency, Alabama courts already have a clear rule.

The recent challenge to Tommy Tuberville's eligibility for governor turns on one word in the Alabama Constitution: "resident." Article V, Section 117 requires a governor to have been a resident citizen of Alabama for at least seven years before the election.

So what does "resident" mean?

Under decades-old Alabama Supreme Court precedent, residency for election purposes means domicile. And domicile has two parts: physical presence and intent to remain.

In Harris v. McKenzie (1997), the Court faced a similar dispute. A city council member was challenged because he owned property in another county, stayed there at times, claimed a homestead exemption there, and even served on a jury in the other county. The trial court disqualified him. Yet the Alabama Supreme Court reversed.

The Supreme Court explained that domicile is where a person's home is fixed, without any present intention of moving. It also made several principles clear:

- Owning property somewhere else does not automatically change your domicile.
- Spending time elsewhere for work does not automatically defeat residency.
- Courts look at objective evidence such as voter registration, driver's license, tax filings, family location, and public representations of home.
- Once established, domicile is presumed to continue unless clearly changed.

Then-Chief Justice Perry Hooper, Sr. dissented in Harris, arguing that formal acts like claiming a homestead exemption should be the deciding facts. That view parallels arguments raised by Tuberville's challengers today. While dissenting views are welcome, they are tempered by the core principles long set by the Supreme Court.

The seven-year requirement in the Constitution is mandatory. The method for deciding whether someone meets that requirement is settled. A challenger would have to show that Tuberville either never established Alabama as his fixed home or clearly abandoned it and adopted a new one elsewhere.

The law does not ask whether Tuberville owns property outside Alabama. It does not ask whether he has spent time in Washington as a U.S. senator. Instead, it asks where his true home is and whether he intended to remain.

We do not need a new test.

We do not need creative reinterpretation.

If this issue reaches a courtroom, it will not be decided by headlines or politics. It will be decided by applying the established legal test for domicile to the facts.

Support or opposition of Tuberville is beside the point. The integrity of our election system depends on applying the same legal standard to every candidate. And on that standard, the Alabama Supreme Court has spoken.

Brandon Blankenship, J.D., is an assistant professor of law and ethics and a Guggenheim Legal Scholar. His research focuses on courts, civic justice, and legal education.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article contains opinions and legal conclusions that are based on the writer and not the opinions of Centreville Press or the Bibb Voice. Your comments are welcome. We are keeping tabs on the Governor's race and will let you know how the arguments shake out.

Update 6/15/2026

June 14

BIRMINGHAM – ALGOP completed a formal hearing today and decided that Alabama's senior United States Senator has been a resident citizen of Alabama for more than seven years and is qualified to be the next Governor. After being presented with over 100 pages of written evidence proving Senator Tuberville moved to Auburn in 2018, obtained an Alabama license in 2019, registered to vote in 2019, and has paid Alabama taxes since 2018, the Committee unanimously ruled that Sen. Tuberville is a resident citizen and meets the standard to serve as Alabama's next Governor.

"I Need Thee Every Hour"

Some of the most enduring hymns are not born from dramatic moments of tragedy or triumph, but from the quiet, ordinary moments of everyday life. Such was the case for the beloved hymn "I Need Thee Every Hour," written by Annie Sherwood Hawks in 1872. Born in New York in 1835, Hawks displayed a remarkable gift for poetry from a young age, regularly contributing verses to newspapers by the time she was just 14 years old. Though she wrote more than 400 hymn texts throughout her lifetime, "I Need Thee Every Hour" remains the one that has continued to touch hearts and be sung in churches around the world.

Following her marriage to Charles Hawks in 1859, much of her life was centered around raising their three children and caring for her home. She was an active member of Hanson Place Baptist Church in Brooklyn, New York, where her pastor was Dr. Robert Lowry, a well-known composer of gospel songs who recognized and encouraged her talent for writing.

The inspiration for "I Need Thee Every Hour" came during an ordinary June morning in 1872 while Hawks was carrying out her regular household responsibilities. She later wrote, "One day as a young wife and mother of 37 years of age, I was busy with my regular household tasks during a bright June morning. Suddenly, I became so filled with the sense of nearness to the Master that, wondering how one could live without Him, either in joy or pain, these words were ushered into my mind."

That simple but powerful realization became the foundation of the hymn's message: a personal, intimate dependence on Christ in every moment of life, during both seasons of happiness and times of hardship.

The hymn reflects a common theme found among many 19th-century women hymn writers, whose works often used first-person language to express a deeply personal relationship with the Savior. Robert Lowry later composed the music for the hymn and added the now-familiar refrain: "I need Thee, O I need Thee; every hour I need Thee."

More than 150 years after it was written, "I Need Thee Every Hour" continues to resonate with worshippers because of its timeless reminder that faith is not only needed in life's greatest struggles, but in every ordinary hour of every day.

Juneteenth: Celebrating Freedom and Resilience in Alabama

Juneteenth, observed annually on June 19, commemorates the day in 1865 when Major General Gordon Granger announced the freedom of the last enslaved people in Texas—more than two years after the Emancipation Proclamation. Now a federal holiday, it stands as a vibrant celebration of African American emancipation, culture, heritage, and the ongoing struggle for equality. In Alabama's Black Belt region, Juneteenth observances intertwine with deep-rooted community traditions of faith, resilience, and fellowship.

The History of Juneteenth

On June 19, 1865, Union troops arrived in Galveston, Texas, and issued General Order No. 3, informing approximately 250,000 enslaved Black Texans that they were free. This event marked the practical end of slavery in the Confederacy. Early celebrations in 1866 featured prayer meetings, feasts, music, and education on rights. Over time, traditions such as red foods (symbolizing sacrifice and resilience), barbecues, parades, and storytelling spread nationwide. Juneteenth evolved into a powerful symbol of delayed but triumphant freedom and the continuing fight for civil rights.

Juneteenth Events Across Alabama, with Focus on the Black Belt

Alabama's celebrations honor both emancipation and local heritage. In the Black Belt, events often highlight education, culture, and community bonds shaped by the region's history.

In Bibb County, local observances include wreath-laying ceremonies, mayoral proclamations, and educational programs encouraging the teaching of Black history. These smaller, meaningful gatherings reflect the spirit of rural resilience.

The broader Black Belt features events such as the Black Belt Community Foundation's Juneteenth White Affair (June 19 at the Livingston Civic Center in Sumter County), with dancing, appetizers, and fellowship, and the Black Belt Juneteenth Festival in Hayneville. Selma hosts community celebrations tied to its Civil Rights legacy.

These Juneteenth gatherings connect to enduring Black Belt cultural traditions like the annual Foot Wash (or Footwash) festival, typically held in September in the Selma/Dallas County area. This long-running event—among the oldest continuous festivals in the region—features communal foot-washing ceremonies rooted in Christian humility and service. While separate from Juneteenth, it complements the holiday's themes of liberation, spiritual renewal, and communal solidarity, illustrating how faith-based practices sustain cultural identity year-round in the Black Belt.

Larger celebrations include Birmingham's National Juneteenth Commemoration at Kelly Ingram Park (parade and festival on June 19), Mobile's Mardi Gras Park events with music and vendors, Montgomery's museum programs, and family-friendly festivals in Huntsville and Dothan.

Juneteenth invites reflection on the past and commitment to a more equitable future. In the Black Belt and across Alabama, whether through June wreath-layings, festive affairs, or traditions like the Foot Wash, communities honor emancipation while strengthening bonds of faith, culture, and hope.

Slow Down and Enjoy Summer Nights at West Blocton Cruise-In

BY SAVANNAH LOGAN
REPORTER

In a world where calendars are packed, phones are constantly buzzing, and everyone always seems to be rushing toward the next thing, there is something refreshing about taking a step back and enjoying a simple summer evening.

The Cruise-In on Main Street in West Blocton, held the last Saturday of each month throughout the summer, offers just that: a chance to slow down, enjoy the moment, and spend time with friends, neighbors, and fellow car enthusiasts.

There was once a time when a summer evening didn't require a packed itinerary. People would gather downtown, lean against a classic car, sip on a milkshake, share a good meal, and spend hours simply talking with one another. The best entertainment was often the company sitting right beside you. The Blocton Cruise-In brings that feeling back.

With an impressive lineup of cool cars, great food from a local favorite, and plenty of good conversation, the cruise-in is more than just a car show — it's a reminder of the small-town traditions that make communities like West Blocton special.

Whether you're a lifelong car enthusiast who can tell the difference between every engine rumble or someone who just enjoys listening to old so and so go on and on about anything and everything, there's a place for you at the cruise-in.

So bring a lawn chair, bring your family, bring a friend, and take a break from the busyness of life. Spend an evening admiring the cars, catching up with old friends, making new ones, and enjoying the kind of summer night that never really goes out of style.
